

REMARKS

The Rejection under 35 U.S.C. § 112, First Paragraph

The Examiner has rejected claims 45 and 60-66 under 35 U.S.C. § 112, first paragraph as containing subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to reasonably convey to one skilled in the art the inventors, at the time the application was filed, had possession of the claimed invention. In summary, the Examiner asserts that the specification does not provide a basis for embodiments wherein the "recombinant plant viral nucleic acid" is not a recombinant plant viral vector obtained from a plant RNA virus.

As suggested by the Examiner, the claims have been amended to recite that the unidentified nucleic acid inserts are cloned into a plant RNA viral vector prior to their transient expression in the infected host plant. In light of this amendment, Claim 66 has been canceled. It is believed that these amendments overcome the rejection under 35 U.S.C. § 112, first paragraph. Reconsideration is respectfully requested.

The Rejection under 35 U.S.C. § 112, second paragraph

The Examiner has rejected Claims 45 and 60-70 under 35 U.S.C. § 112, second paragraph. The second paragraph of Section 112 requires that the claims set out and circumscribe a particular area which applicants regard as their invention with a reasonable degree of precision and particularity.

Specifically, the Examiner asserts that Claim 45 is vague and indefinite in that the metes and bounds of the phrase "plant viral nucleic acids" are unclear. As suggested by the Examiner, the claims have been amended to recite that the unidentified nucleic acid inserts are inserted into a plant viral vector. The substitution of "vector" for "nucleic acid" in the claims is not intended to be a limiting substitution. A viral vector can be naked RNA or a viral particle. Infection of a plant can be accomplished using either form of the vector. It is believed that the amendment overcomes the rejection under 35 U.S.C. § 112, second paragraph. Reconsideration is respectfully requested.
